Do you remember
those nights when the city belonged to us?
We were young and crazy.
No one could stop us.
Nothing could change us.
Do you remember
the days when you and I would give it all?
I'm still waiting for a call
for all my hard work.
We live by these words, and this torch belongs to you.
Will you carry it on for me?
We live by these words, and this song goes out to you.
Will you sing along with me?

Do you remember
the last known residence of your common sense?
The last time I tried to find it
I came up empty-handed.
Do you remember
Daytona, in the hotel, on the road?
I wish that you were there when we took it over.
We live by these words, and this torch belongs to you.
Will you carry it on for me?
We live by these words, and this song goes out to you.
Will you sing along with me?
