Sitting in the glare of the neon smoke
Always mistaken for the light of hope
Mourning in a lonely woman's eyes
She's fallen one more time

Feeling the weight of the morning sky
I'm running again from another lie
From gray to midnight I've been through Every broken-hearted hue

You may think I'm lying, but I swear that it's true
You think hurt only comes in one color
Have I got news for you
I've seen it all, in different shades of blue

Faded photo of a house for sale
Cold dark pewter of a casket rail
There's not too much these eyes ain't seen
Between the yellow and the green

You may think I'm lying, but I swear that it's true
You think hurt only comes in one color
Have I got news for you
I've seen it all, in different shades of blue

Every time we fell in love, breaking down and making up

The azure of a new sunrise, the shadow of a moonlit night
Standing in the ocean laughing, watching as the waves come crashing
Seeing colors that we never even knew

You may think I'm lying, but I swear that it's true
You think hurt only comes in one color
Have I got news for you
I've seen it all, in different shades of blue

You may think I'm lying, but I swear that it's true
You think hurt only comes in one color
Have I got news for you

I've seen it all, in different shades of blue

I've seen it all, in different shades of blue

I've seen it all
