I hate this town, I can't even count the reasons Don't know where I'm bound, I know is that I'm leaving Down a dusty road that's been calling me for years Daddy just shook his head, mama was fighting back the tears

I said, "Time to go, there's ain't nothing left but leaving"
When you know you know, you just can't fight that feeling

You can climb the highest mountain, go where no one's ever gone
On a crowded city sidewalk, you might find yourself
alone
In the middle of the desert, anywhere the wind blows
Son, you take yourself with you wherever you go

Got a taste of the city life, those rollin' hills Man, them L.A. nights, gave this country boy a thrill But it never felt right like I ever fit in So I kept moving on, now it's time to roll again

When it's time to go, there's ain't nothing left but leaving
When you know you know, like the changing of the seasons

You can climb the highest mountain, go where no one's
ever gone
On a crowded city sidewalk, you might find yourself
alone
In the middle of the desert, anywhere the wind blows
Son, you take yourself with you wherever you go

Now I found out the hard way, and I made my own mistakes
But my Daddy's words were with me every step of the way

You can climb the highest mountain, go where no one's
ever gone

On a crowded city sidewalk, you might find yourself
In the middle of the desert, anywhere the wind blows
Son, you take yourself with you wherever you go
Now you take yourself with you wherever you go Oh, yeah
