(Lyrics: Scott Starr)

I've made a vital conclusion today. We are all colors and shapes. There's new blood that runs through my veins. It's blue but it's likely to change. We are all colors and shades. Some bland while others they radiate. There's a new trend of yellow that plays off sparks in the mind you create.

I am a color that breaks up spectrums of light in your veins. But I don't perceive you to be, the color that I'd rather see.

Humor me and tell the life you would live. Are you tired of all the colors that give. Impressions to those who debate. Correlations between love and hate. But I'm just a writer by trade. Who writes about colors that make. The new blood that runs through your veins. With hope that the worlds going to change.

I am a color that breaks up spectrums of light in your veins. But I don't perceive you to be, the color that I'd rather see
