Sanctify

The words I wrote about you

If broken down

They're still a weight upon you

Slide it by

The ones you like

Lose some time

Justify

The things you've said about me

You might be right

There's still a weight upon me

You make me cold

And set apart

But you'll be fine

If you're wanting to settle down

Just put your roots in the place you have found

And if you think you've been left on the shelf

Or that you've brought this all on to yourself

And if you find that your heart's just a shell

Or that you lie in the place where we fell

You're 18 and you're dumb

And you still don't just what is to come

In time

You'll find

Given time

There's still a place there for you

By your side

Where I have laid us for you

Sweat it out

The place that's gone

By my side
