I went to sleep last night wondering how I'd feel if I woke up tomorrow and you were almost healed.

If you could use your hands, what would you use them
for?

Would it be to strangle me?

Because you just can't...

Hold down, why don't you just be the wave that washes over me?

Hold down, why can't I just be the one that carries all of you?

And I can see it in your eyes...

I'll rest my head tonight, thoughts I can't reveal.

The shame inside of me, the fate they've tried to seal.

If you could use your hands, what would you use them
for?

Would it be to strangle me, or just try to ignore, the fact that they don't care, why they stop and stare?

Why they put you in that dusty dirty chair?

Everyday is hard, hard for you to survive.

While we maintain this materialistic paradise.

Hold down...

And I see you fall.

And it feels like I'm already there.

And it feels like you're already there.

You might carry me on through.

And I went to sleep last night wondering how I'd feel.

When the world just came.

And I went to sleep last night wondering how I'd feel.

When you were falling down.

And I went to sleep last night wondering how I'd feel,

when the world just came falling down.

And I went to sleep last night.

Falling down.
