She can't see the landscape anymore
It's all painted in her grief
All of her history etched out at her feet

Now all of the landscape, it's just an empty place Echoes and warning, mountains of tenderness

Cause she's just like the weather, can't hold her together
Born from dark water, daughter of the rain and snow
Cause it's burning through the bloodline
it's coming down the family tree Rolling in the landscape, darling, in between you and me

She wants the silence but fears the solitude
She wants to be alone and together with you So she ran to the lighthouse, hoped that it would help her see She's sober at the lighthouse and then washed out to sea

Cause she's just like the weather, can't hold her
together
Born from dark water, daughter of the rain and snow
Cause it's burning through the bloodline
it's coming down the family tree
Rolling in the landscape, darling, in between you and
me

I wanna give you back the open sky
Give you back the open sea Open up the ages, darling, for you to see

You put the gun into your mouth to die
You put the lid and spit out Cause it's running in the family Oh the rich and

Cause she's just like the weather, can't hold her
together

Born from dark water, daughter of the rain and snow
Cause it's burning through the bloodline
it's coming down the family tree
Rolling in the landscape, darling, in between you and me
