Blind her eyes begin with darkness in her mind
The left and right, inside her, cruel and kind
The past still haunts her now though she was just 15 and noone blames a girl as young as she was

She starts to tell her truth
She's never said before
The things that keep her so reserved
And as she speaks it out, she slowly splits her eyes
To shed a little tear and taste the light

I believe in you
Yes I believe in you

Now she's 24, ready to begin
Let her past be past and start to live
She knew there must be more,
A purpose to this life
Emotions not created just to die

She reaches out her hands, opens up her eyes
As tears begin to fall with pride
For the first time she feels peace
For the first time she feels joy
For the first time she screams, "Jesus, I am yours!"

I believe in you
Yes I believe in you

(instrumental)

I believe in you
Yes I believe in you
I believe in you
Yes I believe in you

I believe in you
I believe in you
I believe in you
I believe in you
I believe, I believe, I believe in you, in you...
