I'll pray
For such heavy downpours the Pacific's eyes would Turn green
The angels above would not be able to ignore
This plea

The rain wouldn't let up
Mountains would become hills
Until the day I've kneeled for
When this water consumes you

Take as long as you need
To let air replace it's rival
I'll be on the top of the world
So high. How's this for intense"

Like a freight
Train, it will barrel through your doors and down
Your hallways
Racing towards your lungs to leave you
Choking
And gasping for your life, you finally realize
This water can just be so damn unforgiving

Take as long as you need
To let air replace it's rival
I'll be on the top of the world
So high. How's this for intense"

I can't insist my heart to keep
Pumping my blood to all my straining muscles
At this rate, my heart rate will fall
Just as far as my expectations of you
For so long now, I've been holding these wires
Forearms swelling tired, I've kept the current alive
The voltage growing in size, I let my arms hit my sides

Where's distance bred?
In the heart or in the head?

Where's distance bred?
In the heart or the head?

Take as long as you need
To let air replace it's rival
I'll be on the top of the world
So high. How's this for intense"
