Sometimes when iâ€™m singing you draw pictures on the walls
And I wonder then if how iâ€™m feeling makes sense to you at all
I show tunes to you iâ€™ve written, and you cover them in paint,
Theyâ€™re better now, grey and smudged,
And dirty like your face.

I swung you to the city and you wished that it was new,
So you could write an art house film and I could make my debut.
All I am asking of you now, is just to take me back in time,
To the nights above the city when you asked if you were mine.

And iâ€™d drive with you all morning down the streets and avenues,
And weâ€™ll sit among the gravestones and iâ€™ll try and break the news,
That iâ€™m happier with you that I will ever be again,
But iâ€™ll give up before iâ€™m done and we can dance in the rain.

I swung you to the city and you wished that it was new,
So you could write an art house film and I could make my debut.

All I am asking of you now, is just to take me back in time,
To the nights above the city when you asked if you were mine.

I would give everything I have to tell you everything I want,
But thereâ€™s too much I have to tell you, too much that i forgot,
I wonder now if all this time, will linger in my mind,
Beyond the days we spend so vacantly when this is left behind.
I wonâ€™t regret the taste of you or how your head feels on my chest,

I'll never spill a single secret, or a sin that you confessed
And and I won't cry when this is over,
When its time to say goodbye,
I wont cry
I won't cry.

I swung you to the city and you wished that it was new,
So you could write an art house film and I could make my debut.
All I am asking of you now, is just to take me back in time,
To the nights above the city when you swore that you were mine.
