Inga Marchand, also known as rapper Foxy Brown Was taken to a local hospital today, when the Range Rover

She was driving spun out of control at a Brooklyn side street

Although she was not seriously injured, Marchand was later arrested

For driving with a suspended license, this is just another in a long list

Of offenses that have plagued this Brooklyn rap star

Yeah, I know it's been a long time since y'all heard my voice Maybe what, 2, 3, years or somethin', been up and down

Been high and low, even been at the point of no return, but no hope Just want to let my fans know that I'm still here, y'all holla back

The sound was broken, too many years being political It's kinda hard to do when everything you're seeing is critical

Is all my fault what they said in the news But it's funny how the public seems to get it confused

They act like they ain't got nothin' better to do All they want is a statement, the hattin' is blatin' But we never paid attention to those who hate us 'Til my face was on the cover of all the local papers

But still un-phased, I kept my cool Plottin', carefully, every step I choose And my, Cool-whit poin, and my write finery Everybody wanna know my side of the story

Well, here it is, the whole truth, plain and simple This'll finally explain all the pain I've been through And in no way shape or form of my provoken violence Please try to understand my broken silence

Seems like everybody's on my back Seems like everybody's on my back
