(s. drinkwater/j. gamache) remotely photograph your surface some fuzzy images start streaming back to me my critics claim I waste my money but I suspect there's something in that frozen sea my cameras go collect the data my team of scientists start combing through results so far the news is disappointing so far my theory has only proven false are you in there? (2x)

I think you are the moons of jupiter
I think there's something hiding underneath the ice
I thought that if I sent a satellite that I would find a new and unknown form of life it's true I'm running out of funding it's true that time becomes a factor in these hours I try to keep my teammates focused I must inspire as enthusiasm sours sometimes I turn my back on science this night I silently recite some sort of prayer I thought I'd hear a heartbeat if I'd listen close so deep in space but now I wonder, are you there are you in there (2x)

I think you are the moons of jupiter
I think there's something hiding underneath the ice
I thought that if I sent a satellite
that I would find a new and unknown form of life

I am safe on earth (I am safe on earth) (6x)

I thought you were the moons of jupiter I thought that something hid beneath the icy face so vast, so beautiful, mysterious a silent giant hanging in the cold of space

I couldn't find you even though you know I tried (4x)
