You'll never pay for the farm
Someone should raise the alarm
I think you're losing your charm
You can't undo all the harm
You can't regret what you get
You can't get back what you bet
You can't divorce from your fate
You're lying drunk at the wake
You never wanted to live alone
But never sure what you don't know
Don't want you to die upon your feet
You'll always want to keep the receipt
They think you're a winner
But you'll never pay, never pay for the farm
They think you're a winner
Change the locks, change your life
They think you're a winner
You never pay, you never pay for the farm
They think you're a winner
Change the locks, change your life
You're never able to rest
You can't get thoughts off your chest
I think you lost the romance
You walk around in a trance
You've got no cause to have regrets
You stuffed your face and then you wept
You're dreaming of a war, the Third
Between the Shiites and the Kurds
They think you're a winner
Change the locks, change your life
They think you're a winner
Never pay, you'll never pay for the farm
They think you're a winner
Change the locks, change your life
They think you're a winner
But you'll never pay, never pay for the farm
You'll never pay for the farm
You'll never pay for the farm
You'll never pay for the farm
You'll never pay for the farm
You'll never pay for the farm
