Well she feels like sugar in the evening
Sugar in the morning time
And when the sun's shining bright she'll get that feeling
A little more sugar might do just fine
I'm talking ice cream, cinnamon rolls, an oreo shake and a diet coke
'Cus you know you gotta watch your figure I'm talking brown eyes, a cute little nose, a smile that shines like the summer's snow
If this could happen

But I know it never could
Like I know she would taste so good
Until the flavor fades away

Well she stays up late
And wakes up early
Maybe a strawberry swirly inbetween
'Cus everybody knows that sleep is surely overrated when you're on caffeine

But I think this untrue
Like I think I'm just a fool
And the flavor fades away, fades away
Like a fingerprint that was left out in the rain
It fades away
Fades away, fades away
Like a happy smile as the clouds chase it away
It fades away, fades away
It fades away

And though it never could Believe me when I say I would
But I never really figured how to handle goodbyes too good

She fades away, fades away
Fades away, fades away
Like a fleeting thought of peaceful destinations
Fades away
Fades away, fades away

On a westbound train with my hopes and expectations
She fades away, fades away
