I'm a simple man living a complex life
I did a whole lot of things all wrong before I learned them right
The first time I felt like a man was in the eye of a storm
Watching the woman I love feeding our first born

Nobody knows about the here and after
What really does and doesn't matter
The question's tough but the answer's simple enough
First comes love, first comes love

Take a good long look at her body, she's built by God
Sent a charge right through my soul like a lightning rod
But time has a way of beating down passion's flame
It comes on strong and wild, then it gets real tame
