There's a stranger in my arms tonight
And I know the reason why
I've left her all alone one too many times

She use to tremble at my touch
And her kiss was soft and warm
But tonight there's a stranger in my arms

She still looks the same
And she still talks the same
And she answers
When I call her by the same name

But now too late, I realize
I let her love for me die
There's a stranger in my arms tonight

She still looks the same
And she still talks the same
And she answers
When I call her by the same name

But now too late, I realize
I let her love for me die
There's a stranger in my arms tonight

There's a stranger in my arms tonight
