You say "go, find yourself a new home"
You say "go, find yourself a new home"

But isn't it infantile to consider yourself the judge, of someone's rights to a better life today?

You say "go, find yourself a new home"
You say "go, find yourself a new home"

But tomorrow when you find yourself away,
I ask you to stop and think about your prejudice because

You forgot about something:
You're not even 'native' and yet you've found your way
You forgot about something:
You're not even 'native' and yet you've found your way,
found your way home
found your way home

and it's ironic that the people that cast the stones, are often the first to moan when the stones are thrown at them

You forgot about something:
You're not even 'native' and yet you've found your way
You forgot about something:
You're not even 'native' and yet you've found your way,
found your way home
found your way home
