Turning turning around myself

Forget the learning it's oh so late

She asked me moaning if I would stay

But I just had to run away
I should have been the one

I should have been the one
Today I'm burning but that's all fine

I chase the foreign and search decline

Been waiting for years to know someone

But when she came I told her none

I should have been the one

I should have been the one

Sometimes I do things all alone
Turning, turning to the thoughts that I've killed

The fence is tall but beyond is the real

I should have been someone like all others

I should have loved you when I could

When I could
I should have been the one

I should have been the one

Sometimes I do things all alone
