Well theres a cross on the hill where the ragweed has grown

Where a mothers young son sleeps all alone
All for the land that he dreamed he could save Yeah, theres none so beautiful as the brave

Oh, theres a stone in the meadow with all the weight of the world

Where the flowers are watered by the brown eyes of a girl

She cries for the life that her one true love gave Yeah, theres none so beautiful as the brave

None so beautiful as the boy who cries freedom None so beautiful as the voice that carries far None so strong as love beyond all reason that fears no evil

Undaunted by the dark or any wicked mans heart

Oh theres a cross on a hill where no steeple bells ring A shrine with no name where little children sing to the rhythm that rocks us

From the cradle to the grave

Yeah, theres none so beautiful

Oh, theres none so beautiful

Oh, theres none so beautiful as the brave

Theres none so beautiful as the brave
