

Girl Next Door

"Superhero"

Visit "Superhero" on MotoLyrics.com

Sleepwalking though the all-night drug store baptized in fluorescent light
I found religion in a greeting card
Now I know hallmark was right and every pop song on the radio is suddenly speaking to me

Art may imitate life but life imitates tv

And I used to be a superhero
No one could touch me
Not even myself
And you were like a phonebooth
I somehow stumbled into
Now look at me
I am just like everybody else

If I was dressed in my best defences
And you were gonna meet me for coffee
If I play tricks with smoke and mirrors, darling, would you still know which one was me
If I was naked and screaming on your front lawn
Would you turn on the light and come down screaming
Where's the ass-hole who did this to me
Stripped me of my power
He stripped me down

And I used to be a superhero
No one could hurt me
Not even myself
And you were like a phonebooth
I somehow stumbled into
Now look at me
I am just like everybody else

Now you've been gone exactly two weeks
Two weeks and three days
Now I'm a different person, honey
Different in so many ways

Tell me what did you like about me?

No, don't say my strength and daring,
Now I'm at your mercy,
'Cause it's my first time for this kinda thing

and I used to be a superhero
I would swoop down and
Save me from myself
And you were like a phonebooth
I somehow stumbled into
Now look at me
I am just like everybody else

And I used to be a superhero
No one could touch me
Not even myself
And you were like a phonebooth
I somehow stumbled into
Now look at me
I am just like everybody else
I am just like everybdy else

Visit Girl Next Door page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.