Maybe you never saw much of me
As you're creeping around your history
It's true, I wasn't always with you
I was so gone but you weren't forgotten
That's why I've been trying to make it up
To you in later years
I hope a father's what I am
But rationalizing's not my aim
Just to pick you up and carry all your pain
And give you wings and not to
Always get the better of the other side
Ain't that what you call love?
Take care of yourself
Do everything you can so we don't lose ya
Showing me off all your side effects
And keeping your face like a silhouette in blue
Is all we're gonna get
But keep it in mind in your last regrets
As you're blowing away like an untethered balloon
And drifting high forever
Is that the side that turns you on?
To see we missed you after all you're gone?
Take care of yourself
Do everything you can so we don't lose ya
If I said I was letting you die
Well, baby, I told you a lie
Well, maybe I'd tell you a lie
If only to keep you alive
You're writing your own prescription
Riding the lines of a minor fiction
If anyone ever could spare to lose a detail
Filing your heart with the facts you're facing
Draining away as your blood's escaping
You could make it last forever
They say that the last time feels like pleasure
Feeling a smile from your unsuccessful
Breathing every memory
As I'm always to prevent your harm
These words you mock me when you cut into your arms
Take care of yourself
Do everything you can so we don't lose ya
Take care, take care of yourself

Do everything you can so we don't lose ya
If you think I was letting you die
Well, baby, I told you a lie
Well, maybe I'd tell you a lie
If only to keep you alive
Well, maybe I'd tell you a lie
If only just to keep you alive
Take care, take care of yourself
