

Goodnight Sunrise "To A New Hour"

Let's cry for tears they've shed, because our own feelings and sentiments are understated And every part of what we see brings a new beginning to determination and understanding If first fall can break it, never go back to check the seams
The stitching is weak and threading could pile to the knees
For once I'll touch you with the issues of a conflict that continues over our heads Wipe dry our crowded eyes There's too much movement on our side

Our thoughts can override our future overnight
We can light candles to blow them out Let the smoke rise with our spirits
Our desires killed the fire Now we're breathing on our own without any further assistance
The longest distance could be more inviting to you If I've said this before then tell me
If only you'd allow me to turn this into something More than understanding the basics of my story
