is it harder to admit you're wrong when you've known it was the truth all along? you make it seem like you're dying somehow i believe you and suddenly im scared you know its been a couple weeks now you know you really better lay down

'cause you don't wanna get sick again

when its hard to breathe you feel your body tingling do your best to just stay sane stay right by her side
and never let her close her eyes you want her to remain within her mind she's got dementia

she's sticking by her made up story that'll never happen to me cars will only crash occasionally its a game of odds you see every one in a million there is something that will make you look again i'll be the end of you

and never let her close her eyes
she's got dementia

so take a moment to step aside and realize whats wrong these things you'll have to make it through they're going to be hard for you

and never let her close her eyes
she's got dementia
