Nobody wants you here but everybody looks you in the eye and says they don't mind that you're here. It's nothing personal, it's just they guess they can't get hurt by someone they don't really know. They don't really know. I'm only as good as i think you think I am and you're only as good as you think i think you are. They're not invisible it's just that they all look away before we have a chance to say hello. I can't talk to you, I'm shallow, I'm invisible, I'm looking for a whole to fall into. You can'y see through what I don't want to show you. I'm only as good as i think you think I am and you're only as good as you think i think you are. She's only as good as she thinks we think she is. They don't really know.
