If could change your days
Arranging them in some sweet new sequence Like any new arrangement is going to make a difference
Because it is the moment that you are living in
And not the one that follows that makes the mess you are cleaning in your head

And time still drags you forward
Although you keep resisting
You know it is what you leave behind
You will soon start missing and
The people you once counted on
Now says its all depending on how you
Act and how you treat yourself

And that is not very well
So baby when I call for you
I want you to come, explain yourself to everyone

You nod in an acknowledgement of your frequent mood swings
But what good is an acknowledgement
It still don't change things
We've tried all forms of encouragement
But it's still no better
You can't seem to fake or force a smile

Not even a little one
But baby, when I call to you I want you to come
And lay it out for everyone
Exactly how it was before any of this happened
And why you can't leave it behind

Now, don't just sit there when I call to you
I told you to come and lay it out for Don't feel awkward
Lay it out for everyone
