Tomorrow when I wake up I'm finding my brother and making him take me back down to the Water. That lake where we sailed and laughed with our father. I will not desert him. I will not Desert him. No matter how I may wish for a coffin so clean or these trees to undress all their Leaves onto me. I put my face in the dirt and then finally I see the sky that has been avoiding me.
I started this letter I'm going to send it to Ruba. It will be blessed by her eyes on the gulf coast of Florida. With her feet in the sand and one hand on her swimsuit, she will recite the prayer of my Pen. Saying, ..time take us forward. Relief from this longing, they can land that plane on my Heart I don't care just give me November, the warmth of a whisper in the freezing darkness of My room. But no matter what I would do in an attempt to replace. All the pills that I take trying to Balance my brain. I have seen the curious girl with that look on her face. So surprised she stares Out form her display case.
