roll out of bed
they're issuing lives for redmen and their wives offering hands and twiddling thumbs, for dreams that never come often said
you better not look away, you'll lose the day the way i see it
it's already lost
so then be it, they say they're sharpening knives and primitive lives, for redmen and their wives bread winners and klutz and losing it all before the one eye shuts well i see it as paying the price, nobody feels it these days well i'd like to go and kiss them away

well i'd like to know
another way did you notice that they're taking back lives from redmen just to give them time to find the light and other things that bind with pride a killer's waking up this time to honest gleam and needless pride we'll never see it shine

we'll never find the time
we'll never find the time...
