He's dead on the lawn

Of the house that he owned

What will they say about him?

He had medals

He was in the war

What will they say about him?

He had folks in Houston

But he moved out west

What will they say about him?

The Mexican neighbors

And women stand crying

Wonder what he was involved in

Always ask me, but I don't know anymore

Always ask me, but I don't care anymore

He was the violent kind

He saved me once or twice

What should I say about it?

I tried so hard

But, I just said no

And what should I say about him? About him?

Always ask me, but I don't know anymore

Always ask me, but I don't care anymore

Always ask me, but I don't know anymore

Always ask me, but I don't care anymore

That he's dead on the lawn

That he's dead on the lawn

What will they say about him?

What will they say about him?

What will they say about him?

Please, oh please, oh please don't ask me

Please, oh please, oh please don't ask me

Please, oh please, oh please don't ask me

Please, oh please, oh please don't ask me

Please, oh please, oh please don't ask me
