MAYBE I'LL FLY

Â© 2005

Jammin' Salmon Music

I'm getting buried underneath a crumbling castle
While the pretty kingdom you built all falls down Though once you treated me like royalty, it doesn't mean anything
Now that you've stripped away the crownÂ...

Who was that little girl who gave in so quickly
To the notion that a prince would make her life sound
And as you ride away into the West my only regret is maybe
I should've built my own damn houseÂ...

With you at my side I covered my eyes
Letting you lead me through my life and now
That you let me fallÂ—maybe I'll fly someday,
I'll learn to fly
Maybe I'll Fly
I never asked what fairytales would have to offer me
I guess only your love and my lost Identity
But She's coming up and when she finally blooms Maybe She'll be somebody's more substantial fantasyÂ...

With you at my side I covered my eyes
Letting you lead me through my life and now
That you let me fallÂ—maybe I'll fly someday,
I'll learn to fly
Maybe I'll Fly

With you at my side I covered my eyes
Letting you lead me through my life and now
That you let me fallÂ—maybe I'll fly
And I'm free enough to decideÂ—enough to realize
I don't even like castles anyway, and now
That I'm free to fall, maybe I'll flyÂ—I'll learn to flyÂ—
Maybe I'll fly.
