"An Apology"

It's hard to take the blame but sometimes credit's due
It's easier to rearrange what's wrong from what is true
The focus is not on you, what part could I have had?
I'm sorry if I messed things up, I wasn't meaning to

And I realize now, it doesn't matter how
I'm responsible for my actions
And yours are up to you

And I realize now, I can't be the judge
If I only see the wrong you've done
Then the wrong should be on me

The circumstantial disagreements that we face
Are better when the truth about them doesn't get misplaced
My senseless rational kicks in and takes control
The words I spoke are said and done, they're meaningless the same

And I realize now, it doesn't matter how
I'm responsible for my actions
And yours are up to you

And I realize now, I can't be the judge
If I only see the wrong you've done
Then the wrong should be on me

And I realize now, it doesn't matter how
I'm responsible for my actions
And yours are up to you

And I realize now, I can't be the judge
If I only see the wrong you've done
Then the wrong should be on me
