(Hank Williams - Hank Williams Jr.)

You're letter says you're unhappy
we're many miles apart
It's a little late to ask for pity
Remember you broke your own heart.

You walked out on the heart that loved you
Has no pity from the start
You cheated and lied and now you're gonna cry
Remember you broke your own heart.

A heart can stand so much sorrow
And then it bends and breaks
And a love that is honest and true
Can turn to bitter hate.

Now that you're gone and lonely
And your dreams have fallen apart
Think of the one that once loved you
Remember you broke your own heart...
