Where did it start? Why? But what does it matter?
We're far beyond the place that we started
No time or mind to chase after fault
When we know the time is so much of what's lost
To a child born something with something so wrong
In his blood, a sickness, that pumps through his veins, through his heart
And shameful, if we only start when we know that it sleeps in a box in the third drawer Where did it start?

Dare we try and wade through this muddy water
Fill this ocean of need, bottle by bottle
Hollowed we stand and watch this parade Saturday morning down to the graves or

Somebody save us Somebody stand up It's ticking away, something must change Somebody save us How many more does it take?
Somebody save us Somebody stand up It's ticking away something must change Somebody save us How many more will it take?

Where did it start? When does it stop?
I don't want to get this wrong Don't you see what's going on?
I don't want to turn you away Until you know what's at stake
I don't want to get this wrong Don't you see what's going on?
I don't want to turn you away Until you know what's at stake
Wake up!
