There was a time when the ends justified the means.
Mama said eat those green beans and everything will be alright. Kiss you on the head goodnight and then you're off to bed. Don't ask questions just do what your mama said. Look around, your mama ain't there anymore. No one to tell you what to do, like she's done before. Mentally slow, still a child, now forced to make it on your own. And you're feeling oh' so alone. Life is a book, it's up to you to turn the page. it's time to grow up, right now, it's time to start acting your age. Let go of her hand is what you got to do. This is one fairy tale your mom can't read to you. To you.
