Who will protect you
From these dog like vultures?
And I know they're small
But their bite is sharp.

We've been sent with
Eyes to see them
And ears to hear their steps.
Our hearts that are softer than the sheep.

We've been known to calm the storm
And silence the ocean
With the strength to spare you from their teeth.

Our eyes are upon you
And we will protect you
And be assured that
No fang will breach
Your fleece

Because we are called to lead
And sent to gather.
So, bare your teeth
And sharpen your claws.

We've been sent with
Eyes to see them
And ears to hear their steps.
Our hearts that are softer than the sheep

We've been known to calm the storm
And silence the ocean.
With strength to spare you from their teeth.

From their teeth.
And their blood will spill like water
In a fountain for thieves
And liars.
So bare your teeth
And sharpen your claws.
Because we hold the keys

And we've been sent with
Eyes to see them
And ears to hear their steps
And hearts that are softer than the sheep.

We've been known to calm the storm
And silence the ocean.
With strength to spare you from their teeth.
From their teeth.
