Hat On, Drinking Wine
"House On Lee Street"

Falling asleep makes tomorrow come too soon She said, "stay up with me tonight, we can talk about the moon."
Anything but a house up on Lee St. that's framed in June,
That I drive by late at night, whenever Autumn comes too soon

Here comes another spiral, here comes another face
Here comes another girl, I probably won't erase But it's just that time of year when all this starts to bloom
But she don't know how I got lost

Every song stays a reminder, of October air That hovered outside a house on Lee St. when you and I were there
And all those things come tumbling by me year after year
Why do I seem to collide with everything that doesn't disappear

This blur goes by, it aint for me We sit and wait for things to change on Lee St. when you leave
A raindrop falls and these clouds go by another year
lived and another year
It died, without you

Here comes another spiral, here comes another face
Here comes another girl, I probably won't erase But it's just that time of year when all this starts to
But she don't know how I got lost

I'm not good at much of anything these days since I left you Inside that house on Lee St. between a shadow or two But there's a mix-tape somewhere that says all the things I thought I knew If I could only remember, I may have missed that blur of you

This blur goes by, it aint for me
We sit and wait for things to change on Lee St. when
you leave
A raindrop falls and these clouds go by another year
lived and another year
It died, without you

Here comes another spiral, here comes another face
Here comes another girl, I probably won't erase But it's just that time of year when all this starts to
But she don't know how I got lost in the moon
