Throwing stones at your window tonight
Let down your long, blond hair
I'd drive through those streets tonight
If only I knew that we were still there
Now I stay up past the sunrise
Until the ceiling makes me spin
And you drift off to the sunsets
That never used to let the rain in

Might as well be gone tonight
Far away from here
Where I could close my eyes for once
Not see those conversations hanging in mid air
So, you throw yourself into the wind
To see if it forgets
All the things still in your head
All the things you still regret

We were stars on a summer night
We were the ones that were gonna shine on
And I knew that yesterday was over
I just didn't think it was gone

Sometimes in the midst of angels
There's a light that never fades
And in between the love and loss
Are the lives we never paint
But you wake up and you feel okay
You're just a little blue
And you wish you could spin all day
Because that's what makes you you

Am I still my mother's son
And are you daddy's little girl
When did we become the ones we swore we'd never be Spinning alone in this world

Now I stay up past the sunrise
Until the ceiling makes me spin
And you drift off to the sunsets
That never used to let the rain in
