Calvert -)

In the tenth second of forever, I thought of the Sea and a white yacht drifting...

In the ninth second of forever, I thought of a
Leaf, a stone, the plastic fragment of the child's Toy...

In the eighth second of forever, I remembered a
Warm room where voices played...

In the seventh second of forever, I thought of
The life I would not lead...

In the sixth second of forever, I saw your mouth
Whispering something I could hear...

In the fifth second of forever, I thought of
The vermillion deserts of Mars, the jewelled
Forests of Venus...

In the fourth second of forever, I could
Remember nothing that I did not love...

In the third second of forever, I thought
Of rain against a window and I thought of
The wind...

In the second second of forever, I thought
Of the pair of broken shades lying on the Tarmac...

In the first and final second of forever, I
Thought of the long past that had led to
Now and never... never... never... never...
