You won't regret it
I won't regret it anymore.
I'm supposed to call you to make sure you know.
I know it's over.
You've known it's over for a while.
Why the smokescreen?
Why can't you say what you mean?

But all the stolen kisses
And all the pink and brown
And if you want to end it, then
Just pull the plug and shut it down.
No one sees it coming,
But everybody knows
That if you want the money, you just have to take it.

If you don't regret it,
Then what's with you staring at the floor
All remorseful
Like you're not sure what happened?

All the stolen kisses
All the pink and brown
And if you want to end it,
you just pull the plug and shut it down
No one sees it coming,
But everybody knows,
That if you want the money, you just have to take it
Or you'll never make it.
