The night was black and velvet, the stars were all around
A stranger landed lightly on the frosty ground His eyes were wide with wonder filled with stars and space
He'd searched the heavens over till he found this place

A sweet and snowy carol echoed in his ears
A song so faint and distant, so strong it drew him here

Here is Christmas come inside
Here is Christmas far and wide
A thousand candles burning bright
Here is Christmas shining in our eyes

He wandered through the city lost in the shopping crowds
People rushing, people pushing, he watched without a sound
Cash machines were singing about the biggest year
But above this strange confusion the carol still rang clear

Then he saw a raggedy man with an ancient mandolin
And he knew he'd found the answer when the song began again

Here is Christmas come inside
Here is Christmas far and wide
A thousand candles burning bright
Here is Christmas shining in our eyes

Here is Christmas far and wide
A million candles burning bright
Here is Christmas shining in our eyes
