"53 Nations"

so many sons and daughters, poised to attack, born in distant fatherlands, marching under the heavens of spain, and without fear go to the barricades...

brothers and sisters in arms, this is the reckoning,
now only hatred fills our hearts, raising the colours of freedom...

in ruthless fights, i saw my best friends die, now buried far away, so far away from home, lionhearted soldiers, no one shall forget their names, understanding what the world still had to learn...

no mercy to the villains, defending the republic infected by a fascist pestilence, this righteous fight reveals your shame, delivered to oblivion, those who fought a horrid beast...

homecoming held no glory and silence covers our tombs, scorned and despised, left and denied, but still do i defy,
i still resist and fight your apathy,
and still i fight...
