In the time of origin there was nothing, not sand, not sea or cool waves earth and heaven did not exist, just Ginnunga-gap, and grass nowhere
From a primitive creature of Giant- race, the cold world was made Frost giants command the cold, the dark and black power Long days and cruel years will someday arrive, for man's time in Midgard is at an end The shall wander into the gloomy darkness. Into the flames and chaos they can not endure Frost giants will rejoice at the ecstasy of madness.
They will become the worlds new,
most powerful race
They will guard the peasants of the world pillage, kill and condemn

To the North lies the castle of over a thousand giants They look towards the land Where everything will be lit afire

War of time
Dark, eternal winter
Tortured in Slid people there suffer

For the giants battle has begun, against what man has proclaimed
Here, the dark fate will triumphant, for here the Frost giants will celebrate
Dark, eternal winter Swords, axes and large hammers will sound. Screams and howls sing like in Nivlheim
The blood of giants & men will flow through the land, and the smoke of burnt forests rises in a black vapour Frost giants fight like mad wolves while men flee like frightened sheep
The giants' power has left its mark. On a once green and beautiful land

No lives are spared after this last war, for here all will die in the worst possible way Women and men, all shall suffer, to Niflheim through Slid they're tortured
In the time of origin there was nothing, not sand, not
sea or cool waves
But now there is darkness, cold and eternal winter, for the Frost giants have conquered the world

To the North lies the castle, of over a thousand giants They look towards the wastelands, where everything is lit afire

For the giants' battle has been won, man has disappeared
Here the dark fate has triumphed, and the Frost giants have celebrated
Dark, eternal winter
(first verse taken from Voluspá)
