You were my angel, the love of my life
Too long was the distance to be man and wife
So I said farewell with pain in my heart
To go on with our lives half a world apart

You're still in the forest and so is my mind
I guess it will stay there though I left you behind
I still hear your laughter, I still feel your skin
Oh, I'll never find such an angel again

When I see a sunset or hear a bird that sings
I'm thinkig of you and I wish I had wings
But time will be kind and pain goes away
Memories will linger, sweetened every day

And one day in life on some warm summernight
I'll look at the moon and my heart will be light
Then I'll hear your laughter and I'll feel your skin
And I will have met with angel again

Then I'll hear your laughter and I'll feel your skin
And I will have met with angel again
One day I'll meet my angel again
