October, I just found out I'm possessed and it might not stop until I rest Now I find it hard to sleep to smile, to breathe, to weep

I hold your heavy heart in my hands as we start to change all our plans A world made again from scratch Life is an empty canvas with a catch

October, I told them about the things I've seen so they had to take a part of me There's no home for our unborn child Let's just pray this winter is mild

But I hear disappointment in your voice
So we fight as if I had any choice Yet I know we'll end up at the start and the promise that death will do us part

October, can't stand the thought I might lose this Your eyes and our daughter's kiss or your anxious hand on my cheek as you search for a sign I feel weak

And now, I think my head will burst
But I refuse to prepare for the worst I refuse to let it choose the day
I refuse to let this spark of life just fade away
