

Hey Ocean! "Greeko"

Argument we had that was absurd
The car ride home when no one spoke a word
All the insecurities I had then
The world around us didn't seem so bad when We sat on your roof talking about our dreams
You losing your patience
Me falling asleep
I left in the morning now I wish I had stayed
You reading Pokaski me singing this way
I want the whole word to kiss me and push me away
We didn't leave a spot of summer, no no
Without the rain and thunder
Hidden in the place to get out
You thought you were so clever (Greeko!)
We sat on the rock til the ocean crept in Me wrapped in your sweater
You drinking my gin
I left in the evening, there was nothing to say
You screaming your head off, me singing this way
I want the whole word to kiss me and push me away
It's the smell of his sheets that seems to keep me here
All the books have fallen through the years
There isn't one of them I never read
Just wrote my name on every page instead
Now in the morning, so it seems, I awake singing from a dream
Ah ah ah
Ah ah ah
I want the whole word to kiss me and push me away
I want the whole word to kiss me and push me away
Won't ever be the same
That we were that day
Ever, ever, ever again.
