Everytime I hide the tracks of my tears behind sunglasses
I had believed that I could become stronger, little by little
Then I realized that there was something wrong with that

I used to always do nothing more than act strong
Though I acted stubborn and laughed
The truth is
I'm just a crybaby and a cowardly pretender

If I'm just hiding, makeup and fashion are hopeless
A true self that noone tries to show
I too had participated in such a game, oh no

Even today, a blue sky rises
Though I think cynically about it, and look away
The truth is
I'm just a pretender who doesn't pride my worrying

Somewhere
There are people
Plotting together
While that hand
Stretching out
Is empty
I'm sure I'll find something

Forgiving each other
In private
We should have exchanged
A promise
Even I have need
Of somebody
Today, I'll meet him

I used to always do nothing more than act strong
Though I acted stubborn and laughed
The truth is
You're the cowardly pretender

Today will be the day the rain stops
Though I don't want to expect it
The truth is
I'm just a pretender who doesn't pride my worrying

We gotta be
In the same situation
Otherwise I can't Understand you
God
Are alone?
That's why you can save us

With just shadows
Covering each other's Hearts
We can touch each other
Even I have need
Of somebody
Today, I'll meet him
