down she goes with a who-you-know; just a blur and it's over her

when she fell holding an undertow-looking-up, off alone, with nights to lose with some broken fuse,

(i hope you're good. is it understood?)

lying down would never mover (something that someone knew; almost in, almost out). it wasn't just a paper sun; the hollow night was just as bright!

take it (now) where you don't know how and keep it on until it's gone or give it in as you hold it down or let it back or even get around---- charging through cold and close, finally free, safe at home.
