I never saw you go, you just faded away. With my back to your face; it's just quiet that way. I never said a word, I just pushed you aside, with my back to your eyes, where it's safe for you to hide, but I left you behind.

I wish that I could let you know, there was something greater. I wish that I could take back everything that I have said. Just move on; there's nothing left, the words I said, they are pushing you away.

Never, I'll never speak with my hands, cupped around my lips, cupped around my lips. Greater, gotta be something greater, than singing songs, and learning lines about the Father's Grace.

I wish that I could let you know, there was something greater. I wish that I could take back everything that I have said. Just move on; there's nothing left, the words I said, they are pushing you away.

I know that I should love you, I know that I should be your friend but I left you, yeah I left you behind. I wish that I could let you know, that there was something greater.

I wish that I could let you know, there was something greater. I wish that I could take back everything that I have said. Just move on; there's nothing left, the words I said, they are pushing you away.

I wish that I could let you know, there was something greater.
