"I wanna tell you a little story" but your ears refuse to hear my words struck down by your impatience you've blinded yourself with your open eyes

I tried so hard to make things right to prove to you that I'm not all bad your system is flawed you say you accept just look at me, another game on the sidelines

If we all get this equal time how do I always get shut out? just because, god forbid, I think different than you my time on the soapbox is already up
