(Holly Williams)

Did your lover leave you stranded Did your heart endure the truth Will you fight to find the healing or will time heal all your wounds
Do you drown in your desire for a time you used to know
Memories can't touch you they are just a picture show Don't let go, oh honey can't you see Everything's a circle in itself
All as it should be

Have you stood inside a nightmare
Did it slap you in the face
Were you left to lose control
Did you ever find a way Was it somebody that loved you or a face you've never seen
So final, so quick are the hands of destiny Don't let go, honey can't you see
Everything's a circle in itself
All as it should be

You philosophize each second then you live as if you're dead Always aching for the beauty of the visions in your head
Was it something that you wanted only never had the guts

Now you stand ashamed and regret your giving up Where would you be, if you had tried If you had given all you could...
To the passion of your life

There is someone out there watching every step you take today
Every struggle, all confusion, endless questions in your
But he's got you where he wants you There are reasons we can't see

We all stand where we belong Every moment meant to be So don't let go, honey can't you see
Everything's a circle in itself
All as it should be
All as it should be
All as it should be
All as it should be

I hope there's something in these words to reveal you before everything you hide And if you never have believed maybe you will find the willingness to try

See everything lies in it's place
