[Katrina:]

He was so pitifully blind
Shoulda been readin' the signs
He's always too busy livin' it up
The man should've known I don't give a fuck
He told me stories of when he was a child
Twenty years later, he's still just as wild
He told me that we'd never grow apart
The man should've known I have a fragile heart

[Chorus - both:]

He didn't see the trainwreck coming
From a million miles away
The rain never poured, sun stopped shining
And he still expected a better day

[Karyn:]

You're not so smart, are ya, are ya, are ya?
You're not so smart, are ya, are ya, are ya?

[Katrina:]

He told me I was his only girl
But never said I was his world
He led me on with all his fiction
Didn't know I have my own conviction
He said that I was so sexy
But wouldn't be seen next to me
He said I was his number one
Now he knows lonely, guess so, huh?

[Chorus - both:]

He didn't see the trainwreck coming
From a million miles away
The rain never poured, sun stopped shining
And he still expected a better day

[Chorus - both:]

He didn't see the trainwreck coming
From a million miles away
The rain never poured, sun stopped shining
And he still expected a better day

[Karyn:]

You're not so smart, are ya, are ya, are ya?

You're not so smart, are ya, are ya, are ya?

You're not so smart, are ya, are ya, are ya?

[Karyn:]

The man should've seen me die

But now I'm immune to his lies

[Chorus - both:]

He didn't see the trainwreck coming

From a million miles away

The rain never poured, sun stopped shining

And he still expected a better day

[Chorus - both:]

He didn't see the trainwreck coming

From a million miles away

The rain never poured, sun stopped shining

And he still expected a better day
